At least 14 boxes filled in by January 28.

What are those things on the other side?

(Your very own “cheat sheet” through The Bibliography Matrix)

What is a University Library Source?

Something you obtained from
A college library like you'd find at the Boise State or the University of Idaho or any number of colleges around the country.

What is a Primary Source?

A source written or produced in the time period that are directly related to a topic by time or participation. Can include letters, speeches, diaries, newspaper articles from the time, oral history interviews, documents, photographs, artifacts or anything else that provides first-hand accounts about a person or event.

What is an Online Encyclopedia?

Wordbook, Britannica are among the examples of this.

What is an artifact?

A item from or directly related to your topic. Can be a photo of an artifact as well.

What are a Media Source and/or Media Webpage Link?

A source from the school library/media center or their website.

What's a periodical or newspaper archive?

Most every newspaper and magazine have online archives of past publications. These are great primary sources.

What's a living expert?

Somebody who has either firsthand experience or has conducted extensive research (like a professor or as a career) related to your topic. Your Mom who read a book or your Dad who saw a television show about it are NOT experts.

What's a neighborhood library source?

Ready? It's a source.....from.....

...a library .....within 50 miles of your home (or closer). Yes, you actually have to go a library.

What's a Reliable Internet Source?

On www.RonHustvedt.com there are a ton of links to a wide variety of sources. If you don't check them all out you are missing out!

What is an Online Database Source?

Go to the Salk Media Center webpage OR Salk History Day website (www.RonHustvedt.com) and click on the links to online databases.

What's a secondary source?

A published book or article by an author who was not an eyewitness or participant but is basing their interpretation of history on primary sources, research and study. Things like textbooks, biographies, newspapers, history books are secondary sources. NOT ALL websites are even good enough to be secondary sources.

What's ProQuest and how do I find articles on it?

Go to the Salk Media Center webpage OR the Salk NHD website (www.RonHustvedt.com) and follow the link to this website FULL of good information. Remember to search “by relevance” and not by date for the best results.

What's a video source?

Go to iTunes and watch a free iTunesU Lecture....OR go to YouTube and watch a video on your project. OR watch a television show, or a video or a documentary about your project.

What's a periodical source?

A periodical is a newspaper, magazine or newsletter that is published “periodically”. You can find these in a lot of different places listed above.
