In June 1866 mail contract from Virginia City, Nevada, to Boise awarded to Jesse D. Carr. Central Pacific Railroad intervened for Beachey and he became partner with Carr. By August 1866 he bought Carr's interest. Beachey made arrangements with Central Pacific Railroad to act as transportation link between terminus of Central Pacific Railroad and southwest Idaho mines.

From here route swung eastward through Limerick Canyon and over the Humboldt range to Unionville, Star City, and Dun Glen. From Star City the route led northward to the Humboldt again at Mill City. It then proceeded up the Humboldt to old French Bridge (Winnemucca), thence it headed northward to Willow Point Station in Paradise Valley on the Little Humboldt River. Thence over Paradise Hill Pass to Quinn River, to Rattlesnake Creek on Owyhee drainage, crossing the Owyhee River, up Jordan Valley to Reynolds Creek and into Silver City.

On September 16, 1868, the Central Pacific Railroad reached Winnemucca. The stage line then ran from there to Silver City. In 1869, they joined Len Wines and began a tri-weekly stage from Elko to Silver City.

Route: North from over Adobe Summit and along the north fork of the Humboldt River to the east fork of the Owyhee River and thence to Cape and Idaho Line where it joined Idaho Central Wagon Road from Silver City. This latter road went south from Silver City over War Eagle mountain to Walbridge's sawmill (near Flint), thence by way of Steel Creek, Snow Creek, and over South Mountain ridge to Big Springs, Battle Creek, Blue Creek, and on to the east fork of the Owyhee River. Stage Stations were established at Saw Mill, Major Brooks', Big Springs Hotel, Battle Creek, and Owyhee Bridge House.
